Objective

The objective of the Mesoamerican Reef Conservation project is to contribute to the consolidation of marine and coastal protected areas, the protection of biological diversity, and the sustainable use of their resources, in addition to promoting the economic well-being and improving the quality of life of the resident populations of the reef system shared by Mexico, Belize, Guatemala, and Honduras.

Lines of work

- 1 Consolidation of marine protected areas (MPAs) to ensure the use of marine resources in the medium term.
- 2 Promoting the economic well-being and improving the quality of life of local populations.

Achievements

Support to AMP through the Small Grants Program: the APFF* Yum Balam and The northern portion and the eastern, terrestrial and marine coastal strip of the Island of Cozumel, and the PN Arrecifes de Cozumel.

1,758 people trained.

268 people adopt better sustainable practices.
