Objective

The objective of the Mesoamerican Reef Conservation project is to contribute to the consolidation of marine and coastal protected areas, the protection of biological diversity, and the sustainable use of their resources, in addition to promoting the economic well-being and improving the quality of life of the resident populations of the reef system shared by Mexico, Belize, Guatemala, and Honduras.

Lines of work

1 Consolidation of marine protected areas (MPAs) to ensure the use of marine resources in the medium term.

2 Promoting the economic well-being and improving the quality of life of local populations.

Achievements

Support for MPAs through the Small Grants Program: ARPEA* Bahía de Akumal and APFF del Norte de la Isla de Cozumel.

502 people adopt better sustainable practices.

2,038 people trained.

Data updated at the end of 2023.
