Objective

The Monte Mojino Fund aims to support local mechanisms for the payment of environmental services through concurrent funds from the National Forestry Commission (CONAFOR, acronym in Spanish), in the Monte Mojino region in southern Sinaloa, to ensure the conservation of sub-deciduous and deciduous tropical forests.

Lines of work

- 1 Operation of a compensation mechanism for local communities.
- 2 Improvement of soil retention and reduction of erosion.

Map: Intervention area of the Monte Mojino Fund.

- 3 Improvement of ecosystem conditions and "flagship" species.
- 4 Implementation of an effective surveillance program.

Achievements

Recovery and conservation of environmental services in 2,224 hectares.

Reduction of environmental crimes.

Annual monitoring of soils, birds, fish, and microendemic plant species.

Sustainable management of 7,880 hectares of agrarian land.

Data updated at the end of 2024.
